Golf pro Rafa Cabrera Bello surfs on the Eisbach wave into BMW International Open.

Munich. Hang loose: Rafa Cabrera Bello swapped his golf clubs for a surf board to ride the famous wave on the Eisbach in Munich's English Garden today. With temperatures soaring, and with his practice round for the BMW International Open completed, this was a novel and exciting way to cool off.

The Ryder Cup star loves to surf when he's not playing golf, so the Spaniard was determined not to miss Munich's unusual surfing hotspot. He loaded his surfboard into a BMW 5 Series Touring and drove from Golfclub München Eichenried to the English Garden, where he was impressed by the legendary Eisbach wave. "I actually do a lot of surfing, but this standing wave is something completely different. It is incredible fun, and I think I got to grips with it in the end. It was certainly a fantastic experience."
